

Book review:

Julian Chela-Flores: Astrobiology and Humanism. Conversations on Science, Philosophy and Theology.

Cambridge Scholars Publishing (2019).

In this succinct and highly interesting set of reflections on astrobiology, Prof. Julian Chela-Flores provides an unusually broad-minded study. Unlike most other scientifically informed studies of the topic, the author is fully aware of the dramatic humanistic and religious implications of the new scientific interest in the phenomenon of life in the universe. Informed by recent developments in the dialogue of science, ethics, and religion, Chela-Flores has produced a thoughtful and readable study that should appeal to readers of many different backgrounds.

Professor John F. Haught,
Distinguished Research Professor
Georgetown University,
P 3700 O St NW, Washington,
DC 20057, USA.